APPLE ROOTSTOCKS
Std = Stanard	S-M7 = Malling 7A	DM26 = Malling 26
Standard rootstock will produce full sized trees. In rich soil standard trees may grow to a height of 20-25' and width of 25' at full maturity. Standard trees will generally begin bearing 5-8 years after planting. Hardy to zone 3.	A semi-dwarfing rootstock which will produce trees approximately 60% the size of standard apple trees. This will generally result in trees approximately 12-15' tall and 14' wide at maturity. This rootstock will cause trees to produce fruit at an earlier age - usually 4-5 years after planting. Malling 7A rootstock is reliably hardy in zones 4-6 and may be used in zone 3 if subject to reliable snow cover (2'4") during the coldest winter periods.	This dwarfing rootstock will produce trees approximately 45% the size of standard apple trees. This will result in trees approximately 9-12' tall and 10' wide at maturity. This rootstock will cause trees to produce fruit at an even earlier age- often 3-4 years after planting. The trees are generally freestanding but in the early years of bearing some temporary staking may be required to avoid leaning. Malling 26 is one of the hardiest and most productive dwarf rootstocks (hardier than M7A). It is completely hardy in zones 4-6 and may be used in zone 3 if subject to reliable snow cover (2'4") during the coldest winter periods.
Dwarfing rootstocks will only reduce the size of the tree - not the size of the fruit. Dwarf trees are easier to prune, spray, and harvest. Bud unions on dwarf trees should be planted at least 2" above ground level to avoid scion-rooting and the loss of dwarfing characteristics. Our understock are budded 6" above ground. This allows for the tree to be planted 6" deeper for better anchoring and better winter hardiness.
