

STRAWBERRY VARIETIES

JUNE BEARING:

(Short day plants that produce one large crop during a two-to-three week period in late spring and early summer)

HONEYOYE: Among the best for home gardeners and commercial growers. The large fruits are conic in shape, bright glossy red, firm and very sweet. Plants are large, hardy and vigorous with early runner production and heavy yields. Ripens mid-season. (Zone 3-10)

SPARKLE: A favorite for jams and freezing. Large, firm dark red fruit with excellent flavor. Plants are vigorous, hardy with high quality yields. Late season ripener. (Zone 4-8)

EVERBEARING:

(Primarily long day plants that produce two to three separate crops during each growing season from early summer to autumn, lower fruit yields, most appropriate for long term groundcover use)

FORT LARAMIE: Best variety for hanging baskets and containers as it will bear fruit on its runners. The berries are bright red with outstanding sweet flavor. High production all season. (Zone 3-10)

DAY-NEUTRAL:

(Modern cultivars developed from everbearing plants, developed to produce continuously all summer and into the fall with most production in June and again in fall)

TRISTAR: Recommended for freezing, bears from spring through fall. It consistently yields a large crop of firm, sweetly aromatic, large, glossy red berries that are filled with lip-smacking flavor. Tolerant to leaf blight and resistant to verticillium. (Zone 4-8)
